The news from Pennsylvania is still incomplete regarding the extent of loss of life at Johnstown and in the immediate region. That thousands have perished, that the disaster is the greatest of its kind in the history of the country does not seem to admit of doubt.

The first thing to be considered everywhere is what can be done for the survivors in the stricken region. They are homeless and penniless. The appalling extent of the calamity which has befallen them should have the effect of inducing prompt action everywhere.

THE CELLARS. The cellars of much of the business portion of Washington as well as a limited residence district are filled with muddy water. This water will not retire of its own impulse with the falling of the river.

NO NEED FOR IMMIGRATION. What the importation of cheap labor from the lower classes of Europe means has been illustrated in the sequel to the great Johnstown disaster.

THE TOWN'S PHOTOGRAPH. It is Solem and Gomorrah again. It is said an awe-stricken town yesterday evening as he gazed at the water flowing through streets which twenty-four hours before had rung with the tumultuous revelry.

Yesterday morning the spot where now a waste of asphalt replaces the tranquil flow of Pennsylvania River was a favorite parade ground for the boisterous revelers.

One incident of the flood, which is attracting very general attention, was the rescue of several comparative strangers in Washington from a comparatively small boat.
