21ST YEAR--No. 6,501.

NEARLY 15,000 VICTIMS

THE LATEST ESTIMATE OF THE LOSS OF LIFE.

The Great Disaster Increases in Horror as the Days Pass--An Insufficient Supply of Coffins at Kernville--Many Buried Unprotected.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 5.--The latest estimates this morning on loss of life, based on the registry of the living and the unofficial poll, put it at from 12,000 to 15,000.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 5.--Mr. J. B. Scott of Pittsburgh is now in charge of affairs here, having been a freeman among the leading men here and that he was in need of a local man in control.

The Confederation of Indianapolis says he is certain that Mrs. General Low Wallace was lost in the flood. He says that she was in the limited express that was washed away. The leading man here is Mr. M. M. Richards of Ypsilanti, who, in company with her sister, Carrie, was in the train when it was washed away.

There was no massive masonry, nor any tremendous exhibition of engineering skill in the building of the dam. It consisted merely of dirt with a light rubble facing inside and a masonry and concrete facing on the outside. The dam was built on a soft soil, and the water was allowed to run off to the sea.

There was no masonry at all, in fact, nor any engineering worthy of the name. The dam was built on a soft soil, and the water was allowed to run off to the sea. The dam was built on a soft soil, and the water was allowed to run off to the sea.
