CHAOS AGAIN REIGNS. PETTY QUARRELS AND CONFLICTS AT JOHNSTOWN.

The Troops Ordered to Charge Upon the Men Who Refuse to Work...A Lot of Americans Attack the Italians

Jounstown, June 13.—Chaos reigns aupreme here to-day. Everybody is excited and petty quarrels and conflicts between the laboring men and their bosses are of frequent occurrence. By 10 celock this morning the town was swarming with inhoring men of all types and nationalities, but the conditions of "$1.50 per day and pay your own rations," under which they were to be employed, did not appear to be much of an inducement, and as a result only one hundred men are now engaged in clearing away the debris. This gang is engaged in clearing away and burning rubbish in Kernville.

clearing away the debris. This gang is engaged in clearing away and burning rubbish in Kenwille.

Not a solitary man is at work on the smass of ruin and patrifying flesh above the stone bridge, the stench from which is fast becoming unbegrable. The indications now are that this day will be wasted, and that tomorrow will witness ne more progress with the work than to-day. The first conflict among the workmen occurred at 6 o'clock this morning, when an attempt was made to dethrone the foreman of the West Alexander force. The contractors disorganized the gang, and put a strange foreman in charge. The men refuse to continue work under any other than their foreman. The contractor would not concede a point, and the laborers returned to their tents, where they are still quartered, and say that they will return home before they will work under a strange foreman.

A gang of over 900 Italians was hired to take the places of the strikers. The laborers did not take kindly to the Italians and intimidated them at every opportunity. No open conflict occurred, however, until the Italians were at breakfast. One of the American laborers made an insuffing remark to one of the Dagos and the latter answered in the same manner. Hot words followed, resulting in a raid on the Italians, who were thrown bodily out of their tents. The Italians reported the matter to Contractor McKnight, who, in turn, reported to General Hastings. The General expressed his determination to suppress such outbreaks at all hazards.

The assurance that all men would be thoroughly protected from violence, however, did not aliay the fears of the Italians and the majority of them returned to their tents. Bystanders say that the conduct of the Americans to the Italians to the Italians to the returned to their tents. Bystanders say that the conduct of the Americans to the Italians to prepare to go to work tomorrow and he would guarantee that they would not be molested.

JOENSTOWN, PA., June 13.—At 10 o'clock, a gang of about 100 men were put at work on the wreckage near the general office of the Cambria Iron Company. This morning a large company of laborers from Greensburg refused to go to work for $1.50 per day, claiming that they had been promised fifty cents a day oxtra.

On hearing this General Hastings ordered a company of militis to the camp of the strikers, who again refused to go to work, whereupon the soldiers were ordered to charge upon them, running them out of the camp at the point of the bayonet.

The day is growing very warm, and the fumes and odors from the decaying flesh is becoming terrible.

This morning two small stores were opened and were soon thronged with customers. Strikers Charged Upon by Soldiers.

CONTRIBUTIONS ENOUGH.

"Take down that sign," was Colonel Emery's direction to one of the assistants at Williard Hall this morning. He meant a big strip of white cloth stretched across the front of the hall building on F street, on which it was announced in big, black letters that contributions of civiling, provisions, etc., were solicited for the flood sufferers, and could be left there.

Colonel Emery, who has been to Johnstown to look after the contributions from Washington and see that they got to whom they would do the most good, returned about daylight this morning, and, after getting some breakfast, he went right up to Willard Hall. First be had the cloth sign in front pulled down. Then he directed everybody about the hall to devote their attention to packing up what goods were on hand and getting them into boxes rather than to trying to get more goods contributed.

A pleasant-faced German woman came up the steps with a big bundle of children's clothes in her arms and said she wanted them sent to the flood sufferers. Colonel Emery met her at the door and said: "Don't you know somebody here in Washington that needs these clothes?" The woman said she didn't, and Colonel Emery explained to her that he had just come from Johnstown and that the people there had all the clothes they needed. "Just take those clothes, Madame," he said, "and give them to some of the poor people right here in Washington. There are lots of them that need clothes much more than the people in Johnstown do. They have got more than they can wear now."

Then Colonel Emery told a Curric reporter how in Johnstown there was one big livery stable packed full of clothes. "The owner of the stable," he said, "wanted to get the clothes out so that he could use his stable, and they couldn't find any place to put them. Everybody has all the clothes they need, and to send more clothes there would be foolishness. So many clothes have been sent to Johnstown that some of the people have more than flay need. Perhaps many people are better supplied with clothes now than they ever were before."

"What will you do with the fifty or sixty boxes full of clothes you have here now?"

The President will keep bachelor's hall at the White House until he leaves for his summer vacation, as the remaining members of his household left for the seashore this morning. Mrs. Harrison, accompanied by the President, Dr. Scott and Mrs. Scott-Lord, left the Executive Mausion about 9 o'clock, the party being driven to the Battimore and Potomac Depot. In another carriage were the White House babies and their nurses, and a special car was placed at the disposal of the entire party, the President returning to the White House alone.

Upon arriving at Cape May Mrs. Harrison and the remainder of the family will go to Postmaster-General Wanamaker's cottage on Pennsylvania avenue, and this at least will have a home-like sound. When business will permit the President proposes to join the family at the assaide, and he will probably go to Cape May Sunday.

Among the first callers at the White House after the President returned from the depot was Senator Cushman K. Dayls of Minnesota, and he was gratified by the appointment of General Mark D. LATE DEPARTMENT NEWS.

A Great Deal of Haytlan Talk.

The talk about the corridors of the State and Navy Departments to-day was Haytl. The officials know nothing except that the Kearsarge has been ordered to Port-au-prince. The dispatch that was received is not at all sensational in its character. In fact, as a prominent State Department official said this afternoon, the dispatch would not make more than five lines in a newspaper. Mr. Walker Blaine, who speaks for his father, declines positively to say a word that would give an taking about the trouble. One reason assigned for the secrecy is that the State Department is afraid that England and Germany may take a hand in the matter if it's known that it's the policy of this Government to establish a protectorate over the Island. It would not surprise some of the Navy officials if several other vessels were ordered to prepare for Haytl.

COWS IN THE RIVER

Cooper McGinn, who, with Mr. Einstein, was sent up the river by the Commissioners to see if there was danger of the city's water supply being contaminated by the decomposing bodies of animals drowned during the flood tying in the river, returned this afternoon.

He is preparing a long report for Health Officer Townshend, which will be transmitted to the Commissioners to-morrow. After teiling of the trip by rall and carriage to Seneca Dr. McGinn tells how bunting boats had to be used to get down the virginia side, and going over went down through what is known as the Beale' or 'Lower' Island section, covering about one and a half miles, to what is called the 'Long Acre.'

one and a-half miles, to what is called the 'Long Acre.'

"Here it appears that the greater mass of drift coming from above has been deposited, and it is here mainly that the bodies of the drowned animals were found.

"Going from island to island and drift to drift, guided principally by the offensive odors arising from decomposition of the animal matter, we explored this entire section and marked the location of the carrasses.

anima matter, we explored this ofter section and marked the location of the carcases.

"In this way ten of them were placed, but many times the unmistakable odor came from enormous piles of debris that gave no contward evidence of the cause. Fortunately, in most instances, these piles were on land well above the water at its ordinary height."

The trip down the rapids is graphically described, and it was a perilous one. Men had already been engaged to destroy the decaying bodies. Dr. McGinn continues:

"The men who had agreed to do the work met us on the tow-path at Long-Acre upon our crossing to the Maryland side, they having gone down on the shore with Mr. Einstein, who was sent to survey the river from the banks of the canal.

"While the investigation made has not developed anything that may be positively dangerous to the water supply, yet the rainfall which had been coming down all day progressed to a steady down-pour, and thus was evidence that another rise might ensue and bring the decomposing matter to the mouth of the conduit below.

"Accordingly, I arranged with Messrs. A. Violet and Henjamin Wallace to proceed at once to the destruction of decaying bodies by means of fire, using kerosene and light drift matter.

"These men are vouched for by reputable

"These men are vouched for by reputable eftizens in the vicinity, and they agreed to have all the offensive matter destroyed within three days, and to produce proper certificates that the work was thoroughly well done.

"We then continued our voyage down toward the Great Falls, finding only one animal on the caonal bank. The boatmen declined to venture further than the first lock above Great Falls, and, as darkness was by this time approaching, we were forced to take the canal bank and walk back to that point.

"We stopped over night at the hotel, and this morning looked over the ground at this point."

Nothing, the Doctor says, was found there to justify so serious appreheasion as the dead animals already found.

Dr. McGinn thinks that many of the carcasses reported as endangering the water supply have been carried below the point where they are a menace.

There is a break in the canal above the opening into the conduit that night prove dangerous, but the canal people have promised to look after it.

The president and directors were authorized to use every available means to restore the canal and to issue repair bonds secured by future tolls and revenues to raise the necessary funds, if the Attorious description of the control of the control

A social event of unusual interest will be the unriage of ex-Secretary Bayard and Miss Mary Willing Clymer.

Miss Clymer is a decided blonde, and is acknowledged by all to be beautiful, but not more distinguished by personal beauty than queenly dignity and a generous heart. She has a graceful, siender figure and dresses in expusite taste.

Few ladies are better known in Washlugton society. She never dances, but she is a charming converser. The bride, who is 39 years of age, belongs to a historic family. She is the daughter of Dr. George Clymer, a grandson of the signer of the Declaration of Independence, a native of Pennsylvania, who entered the navy in 1829 as assistant surgeon on the frigate Constellation. He was surgeon of the Mississippi squadron from 1863 to 1855 and died in this city after a long and distinguished career.

Miss Clymer's mother was Miss Mary Shubrick, daughter of Rear-Admiral William Bradford Shubrick, one of the most distinguished officers in the navy. He was the son of a colonel in the Revolutionary Army, under General Nathaniel Green, and his aide at the battle of Entaw Springs. He was a native of South Carolina and assisted in the defense of Norfolk against the British. He was a leutenant on the Constitution at the capture of the Cayans and Levant in 1815. During the Mexican war he was commander-in-chief of the Pacific squadron. In 1847, with a naval brigade organized from the vessels of his fleet, he captured the cities of the entire Western coast of California and Mexico. Later on he commanded a fleet, and, salling for Buenes Ayres, satisfactorily terminated the international difficulties which had arisen between this country and Paraguay. His widow has two daughters. One of them has been married for some years and the other is now the wife of ex-Secretary Bayard. Mrs. Clymer and her daughters have for several years lived on H street, adjoining the house of Mr. Bancroft, the historian.

Mr. Bayard, who is a distant relative of the Clymers, was born in October, 1828, of a distinguished Deliaware family. He was admitted to the bar in 1851, and soon commanded a practice wide as the limits of his State. Shortly after his name had been added to the roll of Delaware lawyers he was made a United States District Attorney, but he soon resigned the office. In March, 1809, he took his seat as United States Senator. He continued in the Senate until called by President Cleveland to be Secretary of State. Mr. Bayard lost his wife and a daughter while serving in that office. Eight of his twelve children are living, and they all attended his marriage to-dsy.

At the Centre Market: "There have been few changes in the price of fruits and vegetables within the last few days. Strawberries are well launched out now, and the price has consequently dropped. They may be hought at five and seven cents a quart. Peaches are on the stands, and reach up to twenty-five cents per box. Cherries have just put in an appearance also, and can be had for ten cents a box. Apples remain the same, and the new crop of pears have not yet shown up. Potatoes have gone up a little, but not enough to be noticed. Live fowl can be bought at $1.50 per dozen. There are no changes in meats, and beyond the above the market is the same as previously."

The Trial of Sydney B. Cunningha Begun in the Criminal Court. Begun in the Criminal Court.

The employes at the Capitol were startled on the 11th of March last by the sound of a pistol shot. On investigation it was learned that Sydney B. Cunningham of the Senate Postoffice had had some words with Turner Hackman, a riding page, and had shot at him. Cunningham was arrested and subsequently ladiced for assault with intent to kill. His trial began in the Criminal Court this morning.

It is very soldom that the Criminal Court room sees as alignified a defendant as Cunningham. He looked far more like a senior member of the Bar than the defendant to a criminal charge. He chatted pleasantly with his counsel and betrayed no agitation whatever.

A large portion of the morning was occupied in obtaining a jury. Mr. Henry Wise Garnett appeared with Colonel Robert Christy for the prisoner. The defense claimed ten challenges as allowed in the case of a felony, but the Court ruled that the offense charged was not a felony and allowed only there. The following jury was sworn: S. Thomas Brown, Sannuel Bryan, Roy C. Jenkins, James K. Forrest, James A. Talbert, James L. Carbery, Weston B. Turner, Leslie R. Trembly, Renjamin I. Ellen, Robert H. Mitchell, Wm. T. Ashby and Samuel L. Hoover.

Mr. Lipscomb stated the case as he expected to prove it to the jury. On March II, the defendant, Cunningham, was a disbursing officer in the Senate postoffice. Turner Hackman was a riding page in the Senate and received his pay from Mr. Cunningham. On a day previous to the assault Cunningham and Hackman had some words, and Hackman received a blow. He did nothing then, but ister, when he went to Cunningham. On a day the contingham that he had made a cowardly assault on him. Thereupon, Cunningham ras out from behind the desk struck him in the mouth and entered into a struggle with him. When they separated Cunningham draw his revolver and fired at him, the bullet embedding itself in the wall.

Hackman took the stand. He looks to be 27 or 38 vears old, is slender in build, and has a light sandy mustache. His face is thin almost to ancularity. On the 6th of March last, he said, he went to Mr. Cunningham ras out from behind the desk struck him in the month previous. Mr. Cunningham has not there. He saw Mr. Cunningham have not there were not of gentle expostulation.

"I mentioned to him," said the witness, "that Mr. Tatum had not received his check and stated that I had loaned him 520. He said he wanted the loan to pay off his hands. I would like very much for him to let me have the chec Cumingham came out toward him with his hand to his hip pocket. Hackman backed away and they exchanged blows, Cumingham telling him "to get out of here." He went loto another room of the Capitol and Cunningham followed him and fired at him.

The Indiana Mining Troubles.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 13.—A committee of coal operators from Clay County visited Governor Hovey yesterday to protest against any act on the part of the Executive indicative of sympathy with the strikers. They declare that the scale offered the miners is the highest possible for them to pay, and that if they met the miners' demands the mines would be operated at a loss. It had been intimated that the Governor might issue a proclamation showing sympathy for the strikers. Such action, the operators declare, would encourage the strikers not to return to work, and thus increase the prescut suffering. The Governor would not indicate what course he will pursue. A committee of the miners will call on the Governor to-day to lay their grievances before him.

Woodraff and Coughlin on the Night of the Murder of Dr. Cronin -A Dozen Men Being Watched.

A Dozen Men Being Watched.

Chicago, June 13.—One of the most important and startling statements in connection with the Cronin murder was made yesterday by Jack Stanley of the city sewerage department to two friends—T. P. O'Connor and Michael Hart. The conversation opened by an assertion of Stanley that he "knew that fellow Woodruff." Hart asked: "Where did you know him?" "Why," said Stanley, "he worked at Deans' stable on Webster avenue. I keep my stallion there and became suspicious of the fellow. I was afraid he would steal my horse or take him out for service. I made inquiries about him and found that he had worked three weeks at the stable for nothing but his board. This I regarded as a suspicious circumstance. He was frequently for three weeks in consultation with a man who appeared to be a detective or a confidence man. I afterward ascertained that this man was Coughlip, the policeman arrested for the murder of Dr. Cronin, I saw him the night of the murder. I was at Deans' stable, about 9 p. m. Woodruff began to act in a suspicious manner. He alept in a loft over the stable. He took off his shoes on the stable floor and climbed in his stocking feet into the loft to sleep. Five or six minutes after he retired I saw him peep over the stalrway to see whether we had gone."

The importance of this statement lies in the fact that it corroborates Woodruff's story as related to Chief Hubbard to a remarkable degree. It connects Woodruff with Coughlin, the detective, and also furnishes bother link in the chain of evidence which is colled around that person.

A WESTERN NATIONALIST WANTED.

The Herald this morning says: Tom Desmond, an Irish Nationalist from the Pacific Coast, is wanted by the police for supposed complicity in the butchery of Dr. Cronin. He cluded the vigilance of Inspector Byrnes' detectives in New York last Monday afternoon and no trace of him has yet been found. Luke Dillon, who was the first to direct suspicion against. Desmond, as well as against John J. Maroney and Charles McDonald, the blacksmith, has sent the Pinkertons after the missing man and there is every reason to believe that he will be rounded up in a day or two if he has not left the country.

The details of Desmond's supposed connection with the great crime are yet very meagre. It is known, however, that he engaged a room at McCoy's Hotel April 16 last, the day before Maroney of New York, under the assumed name of W. G. Melville, arrived, and that they were frequently seen together and that they left the hotel April 13.

A DOZEN MEN BEING WATCHED. A WESTERN NATIONALIST WANTED.

A DOZEN MEN BEING WATCHED. A DOZEN MEN BEING WATCHED.

"We have at least a dozen men under close surveillance in different parts of the country," said Luke Dillon. Mr. Dillon was busily engaged in wading through a mass of correspondence. "I think I understand the motive of his orime so well that I can pick out the men most likely to be engaged in it. I am in constant communication with men equally well posted, and through their carnest co-operation have every reason to hope for success. If the men who made that conspiracy were members of the Clan-na-Gael, and I believe that the most of them were, they will be discovered and convicted."

Gigantic Trusts in Missouri.

St. Lours, Mo., June 13.—The anti-trust law recently passed by the Missouri Legislature is creating gigantic trusts by the dozen. The latest is a trust of $25,000,000 which takes in all the plug tobacco manufacturers of the United States. Their scheme is claimed to be one of self-protection. All manufacturers will sell out to one company and then take stock to the amount of the valuation of their plant, Leggett & Myers and Drummond & Co. of this city and P. Lorillard of New York are at the head of the affair. Who Moroney Is.

New York, June 18.—The World's Chicago special says: Information has been derived from delective sources that J. J. Moronoy, who was arrested in New York yesterday, is a member of the Clan-ma-Gael Executive Committee—that is to say, the committee which governs the entire organization, and of which Dillon is also a member. It is claimed Moroney has been positively identified as the man who first lived in the Clark-street flat, and afterward went to the Carlson cottage, and that McDonald was his companion at both places.

Convention of Train Dispatchers.

Convention of Train Dispatchers.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 13.—The annual meeting of the National Association of Train Dispatchers began here yesterday, the proceedings of the opening session including an address of welcome by the Mayor of Indianapolis, a response by the president, and the reports of officers. Seventy five new members were admitted, making the total membership 750. The Johnstown flood has seriously interfered with the attendance.

Meeting of Washington Theosophists.

An important meeting of the Fellows of the Theosophic Society of Washington, at which addresses will be delivered explanatory of the doctrines of Aryan theosophy by the general secretaries of the American and English sections, Mr. William Q. Judge of New York, editor of the Path, and Mr. Archibald Keightly of London, England, will be held at Grand Army Hall next Sunday evening at 80 clock. The object of the meeting is to meet and answer the queries of a constantly increasing class of inquirers.

When the train upon which Mrs. E. W. Halferd and her daughter were riding was caught in the Johnstown flood, John Hughson, a porter on the Pallman car, distinguished himself by his efforts in their behalf. Yesterday, through the recommendation of Secretary Halford, he was appointed a skilled laborer in the Treasury Department at $720 per annum.

London, June 13.—While Mr. Gladstone was passing through the town of Wale-tridge, Cornwall, to-day a missile, believed to be a live cartridge, was thrown at his carriage. The missile did no harm. The police are investigating the matter.

THROUGH TO JOHNSTOWN.

The First Train on the Pennsylvania Runs From Altoona West. ALTOONA, June 13.-Last evening three Altoona, June 13.—Last evening three locomotives with ten cars passed over the Pennsylvania Rallroad to and past Johnstown. This is the first railroad connection since the flood. Trains will run through to-day from Pittsburg to Philadelphia and New York. The most destructive breach to overcome was at the visidest below South Fork. It was 405 feet long and ninety feet deep. A substantial trestle now covers the span, Agents had orders to issue no tickets before Friday, but this order may now be countermanded.

The Dunkards and Divorce.

New York, June 13,—A World special from Harrisonburg, Va., says: Twelve thousand people attended the camp of the German Baptists here. Under the rules adopted ladies are forbidden to wear any but the plainest and longest ridding Eabits, and all members will hereafter have to give up their gold watches. The question of the laying-on-of-hands by the bishops and elders was referred to a special committee to report next year. Members were advised not to take sides with politics in voting either for or against prohibition. The discussion on the question of divorce is expected to be attended with some excitement.

The Number of Victims of the Armagh Disaster is Seventy-four.

Dubles, June 13.—The number of victims by the railroad collision near Armagh yeaterday now aggregates seventy-four. The latest addition to the list of dead is a boy named Cleland, whose parents and two brothers were killed in the accident. Cleland died to-day from injuries received. A number of others of the injured are in a critical condition. The scenes around the infirmary at Armagh to-day are pittful in the extreme. Crowds of auxious relatives and friends are inquiring for missing children.

An Outrage for no Known Reason, DANVILLE, ILL., June 13.—A party of men with blackened faces made a midnight call at the house of John Suilivan, near Higginsville, recently, in Mr. Suilivan's absence, and ordered Mrs. Suilivan and her children to leave the house. Mrs.
Suilivan took the children and left in the rain. The men then tore down the house and destroyed the furniture. Monday two men were arrested for the crime, one of whom was fined $50 and cost; the other was adquitted. The cause of this outrage is unknown.
